Art Unit: 1623

Claim 36 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, because the specification, while being enabling for a method of treating bacterial or protozoal infections, does not reasonably provide enablement for the treatment of inflammation-related diseases. The specification does not enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to use the invention commensurate in scope with these claims. The azalide antibiotics are well known for the treatment of bacterial and protozoal infections but are not known for the treatment of inflammation-related diseases. Therefore, there is a good reason to doubt that the claimed method is effective in the treatment of inflammation-related diseases in the absence of any evidence in the specification.

Claim 36 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

It is not clear if the bacterial and protozoal infections, and inflammation-related diseases are treated at the same time or separately.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-36 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Karimian et al (U.S. Patent No. 6,245,903).

Karimian et al disclose a method for obtaining amorphous azithromycin in pure form by dissolving pure crystalline azithromycin in organic solvent and evaporating said solvent (column 1, lines 53-57). The claimed compound and process are anticipated by Karimian et al. In addition, if there are any differences between the claimed product and process and those disclosed by Karimian et al, the differences would appear to be minor in nature and the claimed product and process, which fall within the scope of the prior art's disclosure, would have been prima facie obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the instant invention was made.
